Best Practices in Open Science and Citizen

Science: from Principles to Practice

Join this workshop for a comprehensive overview of Open Science and Citizen Science, exploring their definitions and diverse applications in modern research. Moving from theory to practice, the workshop will feature a Best Practice example from UNINA: Marco Salvemini's STOPTIGRE project, showcasing innovative community engagement to contrast insect vectors. A concluding roundtable will facilitate discussion on the interplay between Open Science, research innovation and public engagement.

Understand the principles, see the applications, shape the future of collaborative research.
