Košice – a university city

Košice 2013 – European Capital of Culture

www.kosice.sk

Košice is a city with an eventful and illustrious past and multicultural and colourful present. It is a seat of culture and education. During the university semesters students make the city their own, and one may find them at every turn: in the theatres, the museums, the galleries, the concert halls, the libraries, and the parks. Almost nine thousand future professionals in medical, legal, scientific, social, philosophical disciplines and arts study at Pavol Jozef Šafárik University, further swelling the already large permanent population of the city of over 240,000.

Košice's earliest documents date back to 1230 and refer to it as "Villa Cassa". Its coat of arms is the oldest in Europe, a fact attested to by a letter dating from 1369. The city's historic sights – from various periods – are concentrated in the centre, the Urban Heritage Area. The recently reconstructed Main Street, lined by the houses and palaces of the burghers of the past, offers visitors a pleasant stroll, and is also the venue for many major events. Košice has always been known for its extraordinary mixture of cultures and dialects, a mixture that contributes greatly to the attractions of the city.

History of Pavol Jozef Šafárik University in Košice

Pavol Jozef Šafárik University in Košice (UPJŠ) is the second oldest university in Slovakia. The history of higher education in Košice goes back to the year 1657, when the bishop Benedict Kishdy founded the Academia Cassoviensis, which was run by the Jesuits of Jesus' Community. The University of Košice Golden Bull issued in 1660 by the Holy Roman Emperor Leopold I granted the Universitas Cassoviensis the same privileges as all the other universities of the Habsburg empire. The structure of Universitas Cassoviensis was similar to that of other universities, with faculties of Philosophy, Law and Theology, the last of these being the strongest. Study at the Philosophical Faculty was dedicated primarily to philosophy, history and languages, but the lectures – which were in Latin – also included presentations of the natural sciences: physics, mathematics, geography and botany. The Universitas Cassoviensis had its own library and a church, and it significantly influenced the advancement of science, educational attainment and spiritual culture in the 17th and 18th centuries.

In 1959 the traditions of the Universitas Cassoviensis were revived through the foundation of the Pavol Jozef Šafárik University in Košice. It originally consisted of the Faculty of Medicine (in Košice) and the Faculty of Philosophy (in Prešov). Gradually the university was enlarged by the addition of new faculties: the Faculty of Science in Košice in 1963, the Faculty of Education in Prešov in 1964, Faculty of Law in Košice in 1973, the Faculty of Public Administration in Košice in 1998, and finally the Faculty of Arts in Košice in 2007.

UPJŠ HISTORY

Pavol Jozef Šafárik University in Košice FACULTY OF ARTS

Šrobárova 2, 040 59 Košice, Slovakia

The Faculty of Arts offers the following undergraduate and postgraduate study programmes taught in English:

- Psychology
In the Department of Psychology students can choose from the BA and MA programmes in Psychology and the PhD programme in Social Psychology and Psychology of Work.

- British and American Studies
The BA and MA programme explores three complementary areas: linguistics, literatures in English, and cultures of the United Kingdom and the United States in order to provide a broad spectrum for future language professionals.

- The English Language for European Institutions and Economy

This is a BA and MA translation/interpretation-oriented programme aimed at equipping potential EU translators/interpreters with the required professional terminology as well as becoming familiar with all types of translation and interpretation.

- The English Language and the French Language for European Institutions and Economy

This BA translation/interpretation-oriented programme equips its graduates with professional terminology and translation/interpretation skills in the two languages.

- Gender Studies and Culture
The BA programme is an exploration of culture and society focusing on the ways gender is perceived, expressed and used to create different social realities for members of the society.

The PhD programme in British and American Studies gives individuals the opportunity to specialize in one of the three core areas: English linguistics, literatures in English and cultures of the United Kingdom and the United States.

FACULTY OF MEDICINE

Pavol Jozef Šafárik University in Košice – a university with a strong international dimension

Pavol Jozef Šafárik University in Košice has established itself in the European education and research arena. It is a member of the European University Association and a signatory of Magna Charta Universitatum. It is a seat of the European Documentation Centre, the Institute of European Law and the Austrian Library. Both education and scientific research at the UPJŠ are carried on in a broad international context and follow European trends. The research teams, led by internationally recognized personalities, use funding from both national and international sources; every year up to 200 research projects are funded (around 20 by foreign grants). The number of publications per staff member in high-quality international journals, the high proportion of papers registered in the Current Contents Connect database and the number of citations in registered databases rank the UPJŠ amongst the best research universities in Slovakia.

The development of the international dimension of the UPJŠ is closely related to the LLP/Erasmus mobility programme for staff and students and to mobility within the National Scholarship Programme of the Slovak Republic. The numbers of UPJŠ students who complete part of their studies abroad as well as the number of incoming students and staff are all growing. The UPJŠ has more than 230 Erasmus bilateral agreements with universities in 20 countries. For international Erasmus students, the International Office of UPJŠ regularly organizes EILC – Erasmus Intensive Language Courses – that enable incoming students to study the Slovak language, to understand the Slovak culture, and to become familiar with the academic milieu in Slovakia.

Pavol Jozef Šafárik University in Košice is also open to Free Movers.

Pavol Jozef Šafárik University in Košice – a progressive classical university

<http://www.upjs.sk/en/information/current-students/>

Pavol Jozef Šafárik University in Košice is the second classical university of Slovakia. It ranks among the important and widely-recognized educational and research institutions not only in Slovakia, but also in Europe. Its key mission is to provide education and service to its students and the community by spreading knowledge based on the most recent scientific findings in an international context, as well as to conduct high-quality research. The UPJŠ also supports activities contributing to the education and culture of the public and it helps students develop greater wisdom, creativity, tolerance, critical and independent thinking, self-confidence, and both regional and national awareness.

At present the UPJŠ provides education at its five faculties to almost 9,000 students in more than 105 BA, 65 MA and 35 PhD programmes, with more than 700 lecturers and research staff who use the results of their own high-quality scientific research, the most recent experimental technology, the latest ITC and innovative methods of education.

The University has mainly focused on creating a permanent system of monitoring and improving the quality of education in all the accredited study programmes. Instead of extensive generating new study programmes and increasing the number of students, the emphasis has been placed on optimising the content and methods of implementation of the existing study programmes. The university policy is to promote maximum mutual openness and connectedness of courses, so that the students may benefit from the widest range of opportunities across the university, not just within individual faculties. Improving the quality of the education provided and of the university organization has required a focus on improvement of the physical infrastructure, particularly continuous modernisation and variation of teaching technology, specifically exploiting the Internet and new information technologies.

Students can use the services of the University Library, the Centre for Information and Communication Technologies, and the Botanical Garden. The UPJŠ has more than 2,500 accommodation places, and excellent catering services located near the city centre. The Institute of Physical Education and Sports offers education in the field of sports and recreation, training courses for students, physical education camps, and hobby sports activities for staff, students and public throughout the year, also organizing such events as University Days of Sport, the Wellness Day, or the Intervention Motion Programme.

UPJŠ TODAY

FACULTY OF SCIENCE

Šrobárova 2, 041 54 Košice, Slovakia

The Faculty of Science was founded in 1963 and during its existence it has educated more than 6,000 graduates of both, single and joint degree study in all branches of sciences. The Faculty offers the study in English to students as an individual study programme. The study is divided into BA and MA degree levels.

BA study programmes:

Applied Informatics, Biology, Chemistry, Environmental Chemistry, General Ecology and Ecology of Individuals and Populations, Geography, Informatics, Mathematics, Physics.

MA study programmes:

Analytical Chemistry, Biochemistry, Biophysics, Botany and Plant Physiology, Economic and Financial Mathematics, General Ecology and Ecology of Individuals and Populations, Genetics and Molecular Cytology, Geography, Informatics, Inorganic Chemistry, Managerial Mathematics, Mathematics, Nuclear and Subnuclear Physics, Organic Chemistry, Physics, Physics of Condensed Matter, Zoology and Animal Physiology.

The Faculty also offers PhD study in different fields:

Analytical Chemistry, Applied Mathematics, Biochemistry, Biophysics, Discrete Mathematics, General Ecology and Ecology of Individuals and Populations, General Physics and Mathematical Physics, Genetics, Informatics, Inorganic Chemistry, Molecular Cytology, Nuclear and Subnuclear Physics, Organic Chemistry, Physics of Condensed Matter, Physiology of Animals, Plant Physiology, Theory of Teaching Mathematics, Theory of Teaching Physics.

Biology and Ecology is oriented on the study of cancerogenesis and cancer therapy, genetic regulation of biosynthesis of secondary metabolites, biodiversity and population and community ecology of plants and animals, physiology and biotechnology of plants, animal physiology and ethology and cave biology.

Geography studies the Earth's landscapes and human activities, structure and dynamics of the places and regions. The issues of Physical, Human and Regional Geographies are spatially analysed and modelled using Geographical Information Systems.
