

Doctor Maria Bacikova-Sleskova
Department of Pedagogical Psychology and Psychology of Health,
Faculty of Arts, Pavel-Jozef Safarik University

INVITATION LETTER

Dear Doctor Bacikova-Sleskova,

We are pleased to invite you to participate as an expert in the 13rd International Scientific-Practical Conference “Adolescent in the city: Inequality and opportunities” (April 14-16, 2020, Moscow, Russia) with a keynote lecture titled “Do adolescents need parental control?”.

International Scientific-Practical Conference “Adolescent in the city” brings together leading researchers and practitioners in order to foster development in all fields of education, psychology and psychosocial support of the adolescence. The Conference develops methods of scientific-practical collaboration through the synthesis of research on effective educational and psychological practices and policies. One of the main activities of the Conference is to transmit advanced knowledge to educational personnel and to facilitate the implementation of further research and the improvement of practice. We believe the 13rd International Scientific-Practical Conference “Adolescent in the city” will be a unique opportunity for its participants to share knowledge about the most recent research and practices in the field of adolescence – psychology, psychosocial support, measurement, teaching and learning processes.

In the context of the pandemic, the conference was moved to online mode and will be held on the Zoom platform. The conference program and all organizational details can be found on the conference website: conference.perekrestok.info

We are looking forward to your participation.

Sincerely,

Chair of the program committee of the conference
"Adolescent in the city: Inequality and opportunities", PhD, Head of Psychological Service of the Institute of Social Science of the Russian Presidential Academy of National Economy and Public Administration

Kirill Khlomov